Lillian Pitt, a Native American artist from the Big River (Columbia River) region of the Pacific Northwest, will share stories about her ongoing journey in life. Born on the Warm Springs Reservation in Oregon, she is a descendent of Wasco, Yakama, and Warm Springs people. "Everything I do, regardless of the medium, is directly related to honoring my ancestors and giving voice to the people, the environment and the animals. It's all about maintaining a link with tradition, and about honoring the many contributions my ancestors have made to this world."

The mission of the Natural Way: Indigenous Voices Series, an Earth & Spirit Council program, is to honor all traditions that value the Earth.

The Natural Way provides a forum for those who strive to preserve and enhance earth-based, sustainable living, to share their traditions, knowledge and beliefs about the Earth.
